Office Action Summary

Applicants' response of Nov. 17, 2003, is noted.

The claims in the application are claims 1, 3, 5, 10-31, 46, 47 and 51-58.

Claims 1, 3, 5, 10-31, 46, 47 and 51-57 are allowed.

A method of treating some central or peripheral nervous system disorders is not specific enough to meet the Utility Guidelines. The use of "such as" in a claim is not acceptable; Ex parte Cardova, 10 U.S.P.Q. 2nd 1949. Claim 58 is rejected under 35 U.S.C. 112, 1st paragraph, Parkinson disease has no established regimen of treatment.

All mood disorders is too broadly stated. Seasonal effective disorders are included therein. Light effective disorders are included. Gastrointestinal disturbances has many causes; stress, acid meal, contaminated food.

The uses here are not specific. Reduction in the O-methylation of catechol amines is a laboratory screen test.

The recent utility guideline_s set by PTO require applicants to meet the requirements as stated in Brenner v. Manson in, 148 USPQ 689, which requires that utility be developed to a point where "specific benefits exist in currently available form". Similar is the "immediate benefit to the public" standard that Nelson v. Bowler, 206 USPQ 880 refers to. The standard set forth in the concurring opinion of In re Hartop, 135 USPQ 419 is "whether the invention has been brought to such perfection as to be capable of practical employment". This language is echoed in Bindra vs. Kelly, 206 USPQ 570.

A broad disclosure of utility, as in the cited claims, cannot be deemed in compliance with 35 U.S.C. 101 and 35 U.S.C. 112, first paragraph. The treatment of hypertension – is suggested. The PTO has amended the guidelines to clarify “specific utility”.

The Court focused on the fact that the applicant failed to identify a “specific utility” in Brenner v. Manson.

This requirement of one specific utility, is consistent with Unity of Invention Practice in International Applications and National Phase Applications under 35 U.S.C. 371, and PCT Rule 13.2 for PCT applications.

Therefore, applicants should rewrite claim 58 to a “specific utility”.
